

Once upon a time there was a looming energy crisis all over our world.

Every single day, over 15,000 people died from air pollution and 1.2 billion people couldn't warm their homes.

Until One day, brilliant scientists at ZPower developed a low cost solar generator that works day and night -- that can power our factories, our cars, and even our smartphones.

Because of that, green cities appeared. Because of that, every person enjoyed a truly abundant life.

Until finally, this breakthrough became such a fixture in our lives that we wondered how we ever got along without it.
